FAQ

Altar Tradition:

Creating an altar to honor the dead is one of the most important parts of Dia de los Muertos. Altars can be heartfelt and humorous, simple or extravagant. In addition to deceased family members and friends, altars are constructed for departed pets, celebrities, and historical figures. The Sacred Altar Exhibition and Competition will showcase a variety of perspectives within the Dia de los Muertos tradition.

As part of San Pedro's Dia de Los Muertos festival, the San Pedro Historic Waterfront Business Improvement District will be presenting an open-air exhibition of community altars that honor the deceased and/or explore the tradition of Dia de Los Muertos and other such rituals memorializing the dearly departed. For those unfamiliar with this Holiday's traditions, altars honor the deceased with food and oftentimes colorful and playful offerings. Tributes include everything from toys for children, photographs, special foods, or other symbolic items that were meaningful prior to death. Marigolds, also known as the flower of the dead (cempasúchil), are often used as well as colorful paper flowers, birds, or skeletons. The images of the skeletons (calacas) are not meant to be scary, but instead mimic joyful moments, such as dancing.

Community Altar of Remembrance:

There will also be a community altar where anyone who has lost a loved one is invited to leave a picture, personal note, or other small items of remembrance.

Prizes:

Cash prize of $1000 to first-place winning entries.
Altar winners will be announced at the end of the evening before the final performances.
